Itinerary

Day 1 – Sun Sept 28

- Muskegon → Chicago (KG 5760, dep 12:05 pm, arr 11:55 am)
 - American Airlines Flagship Lounge in T3 near Gate K19

- Chicago ORD → Madrid (Iberia IB 342, dep 4:30 pm, arr Sept 29 7:55 am)

Day 2 – Mon Sept 29

- 07:55 — Arrive Madrid Barajas T4.
- 08:50–09:10 — Transfer to Chamartín (Cercanías train):
- 10:04 — Depart Chamartín (AVE 05273, Confort, seat 05B)
- 12:18 — Arrive Ourense.
- 12:32 — Depart Ourense (MD 12694)
- 13:47 — Arrive Sarria
- Check-in: Albergue O Durmiñento.
- Afternoon: explore old town.
 - Pick up pilgrim credential (credencial) at Iglesia de Santa Mariña, the Tourist Office on Rúa Maior. Monastery of La Magdalena is another option. (~€2–3 cash)
- Evening: pilgrim dinner.
 - Recommended to join a lively spot such as Mesón O Tapas do Peregrino or O Descanso for the set pilgrim menu (starter, main, dessert, wine/water). These places are popular with walkers and a good way to meet fellow pilgrims before starting the Camino.

Note

Daily Summary — Sept 29

The travel into Galicia was a bit of an adventure. My flight into Madrid was delayed, which made me miss my original train. I caught a later one, but even that got interrupted because wildfires had closed part of the tracks, so we all had to switch to a bus for the last stretch. By the time I finally made it to Sarria about 9:30 pm, I was ready to settle in. I checked into my hostel and had a pilgrim dinner with a new friend from Salamanca who arrived around the same time. The meal was classic Galician: caldo gallego, Estrella beer, and roasted pork. Galicia is famous for its rain, but so far the weather has been unexpectedly kind. I also got my pilgrim credential and my very first stamp—fittingly, at the restaurant where I ate dinner.

Days 3–7 – Sept 30 to Oct 4 (Camino Francés – last 115 km)

- Day 3 (Sept 30): Sarria → Portomarín (~22 km)
 - Cross the Miño River into Portomarín, where the Church of San Nicolás was relocated stone by stone when the original town was flooded for the Belesar reservoir.
 - Overnight: Pensión Albergue Gonzar

Note

Daily Summary — Sept 30

First walking day on the Camino: Sarria to Portomarín, about 22 km. We set out before the sun because my walking partner didn't have reservations and needed to be sure to claim one of the first-come beds. The trail was wrapped in fog almost the whole morning until the sun finally burned through. Along the way we met another pilgrim from Madrid who decided to join us after overhearing Guillermo joke that the village we were passing looked like something straight out of the Resident Evil video game. We stopped for a pilgrim breakfast at Mirador da Brea, then pushed on to Portomarín.

When I got to my hostel, I did the usual Camino routine: shower, laundry in the sink, and then a much-needed nap. Later in the afternoon I wandered through the old town of Portomarín, which was rebuilt stone by stone on higher ground after a dam project flooded the original village in the 1960s. Now I'm back on the albergue patio with a café con leche, enjoying the quiet before heading out for dinner.

- Day 4 (Oct 1): Portomarín → Palas de Rei (~25 km)
 - Pass historic pilgrim hospices at Hospital de la Cruz and end in Palas de Rei, whose Church of San Tirso preserves remarkable medieval carvings.
 - Overnight: Albergue San Marcos

Note

Daily Summary — Oct 1

Dinner in Portomarín last night was Galician pork on a small patio at sunset with Gabriel and Guillermo. They left earlier than I did this morning since they didn't have reservations and needed to find open albergues. I was still up before 7:00 because the dorm room was noisy with snoring and people rustling to leave. I took a wrong turn heading out of Portomarín in the dark but corrected quickly and continued the climb out of town. I stopped at a café for tortilla francesa with cheese (an omelet on bread), a café con leche, and fresh orange juice, which is excellent here. Later in the morning the fog lifted, and the day turned sunny with clear skies.

The Camino passed farms with cows, small villages of stone houses, and stretches of countryside with pine trees, rolling hills, and fields. At one crossroads I met Paul, an older man from Paris, who by coincidence I saw him again this afternoon staying at the same albergue in Palas de Rei.

When I arrived in Palas, I tried pulpo a la gallega (octopus), another Galician specialty. It was good, though not something I'll seek out at home. At the albergue I showered, washed my clothes in the sink, and took a short nap. I'll likely take a short walk around town this evening, but I'm sore from the day's walk.

- Day 5 (Oct 2): Palas de Rei → Arzúa (~29 km)
 - Often stop in Melide, famous for pulpo a la gallega (octopus) and the Romanesque church at Leboreiro.
 - Arzúa is known for its cheese production and nearby Ribadiso hosts a medieval pilgrim hospital.
 - Overnight: Cruce de Caminos Arzúa
- Day 6 (Oct 3): Arzúa → O Pedrouzo (~19 km)
 - En route visit the chapel of Santa Irene and experience the atmosphere of anticipation in O Pedrouzo as pilgrims gather for the final day.
 - Overnight: Albergue REM
- Day 7 (Oct 4): O Pedrouzo → Santiago (~20 km)
 - Highlights include Lavacolla, the traditional cleansing site, Monte do Gozo offering panoramic views of Santiago, and attending the Pilgrim's Mass featuring the Botafumeiro.
 - Collect Compostela certificate in Santiago.
 - Overnight: Pensión Rua Nova (Rúa Nova, 4, Santiago de Compostela).

Day 8 – Sun Oct 5

- Full day in Santiago.
- Morning: Pilgrim's Mass and/or cathedral museum/rooftop tour.
- Afternoon: wander the old town, Alameda Park, and relax at a café.
- Evening tapas crawl on Rúa do Franco.
- Overnight: Pensión Rua Nova (Single room with private bathroom, free Wi-Fi, pedestrian old town location).

Day 9 – Mon Oct 6

- Decision point: Reassess energy and weather on the evening of Oct 4 (after arrival in Santiago) to decide whether to overnight in Finisterre or remain in Santiago
- Morning bus to Finisterre (~2.5 hrs).
- Explore the fishing port, beach, and town.
- Evening walk to Cabo Fisterra lighthouse for sunset at the “end of the world.”
- Overnight: Finisterre (book in Santiago if weather/energy permit) OR third night in Santiago — decision to be made after arrival.

Day 10 – Tue Oct 7

- Morning in Finisterre — coffee in town or short coastal stroll.
- Midday bus back to Santiago (~2.5 hrs).
- 11:48 — Depart Santiago (AVE 04314, Confort, seat 4D, Booking Reference: KYC3XB).
- 14:50 — Arrive Madrid Chamartín.
- Evening tapas crawl in La Latina or Malasaña.
- Overnight: Petit Palace Plaza Mayor

Day 11 – Wed Oct 8

- 08:30 am — Arrive at Madrid Barajas T4 (recommended 3 hrs before departure, take Cercanías train from central Madrid).
- From Petit Palace Plaza Mayor:
 - Walk ~5 min to Sol station.
 - Take Cercanías C3 or C4 northbound to Chamartín (~10 min).
 - At Chamartín, transfer to Cercanías C1 or C10 directly to Barajas T4 (~15–20 min).
 - Total travel time ~40 min including transfer. Trains run every 15–20 min.

- Alternative: Taxi/Uber directly to T4 (~25–35 min, €30–35 flat rate).
 - Madrid → Chicago ORD (Iberia IB 341, dep 11:35 am, arr 2:15 pm)
 - Chicago → Muskegon (KG 5775, dep 6:00 pm, arr 7:50 pm)
